(King Peter, one of the most picturesque figures of the war, went to the front last year in an hour of his country's supreme need. He is seventy-one years old and has been at Topoli, the cradle of the Karaogorish dynasty, in and week. His troops are menaced on three sides by the invading armies.)

With Carriage, It Weighs 600 Tons and Goes on Train of 14 Specially Made Cars.

HURLS SHELL 21 MILES.

Railroad Men Apprehensive, Take Precautions for Trip From Watertown, Mass.

WATERTOWN, Mass., Nov. 4.—The biggest gun of its class in the world, capable of throwing a projectile twenty-one miles, left the United States Arsenal here today for the Sandy Hook proving ground on a train of fourteen specially constructed cars. It is a sixteen-inch disappearing gun and with the carriage weighs 600 tons.

The gun itself was made in Watertown, N. Y., some months ago and was shipped here to have the carriage fitted. Several times along the way its weight, 300 tons, spread the rails, and the present trip, with 400 tons added, is causing traffic managers of the roads over which it will travel considerable anxiety.

Orders were issued by railroad officials to have all lights in the Hoosic Tunnel extinguished while the train was passing through to prevent the possibility of causing a short circuit by the presence of such a large amount of steel.

The gun will ultimately be used in the Panama Canal fortifications.

All along the Seine, Mrs. Kellogg said, "paniches" or low-brow colonies have been established to take care of Belgian refugees, and these are maintained by popular subscription, 10 cents a day sufficing to take care of each of the refugees.

KILLED BY VILLA ON ARMY MARCH

Men, Impressed for Service With Their Horses, Shot When They Asked Release.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 4.—The bodies of two American Mormon colonists reported shot down by Gen. Villa, were taken into Casas Grandes, Chihuahua today.

Villa had impressed the Americans and their teams into service at Casas Grandes several days ago to haul his ammunition when he began his march on Agua Prieta. When the Americans reached Agua Prieta, Sonora, they asked for their release from service.

Villa's reply was to shoot them down, it is charged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Gen. Funston, after spending two days practically under fire on the border at Douglas, Ariz., today told the War Department of events during and following the battle at Agua Prieta.

"The whereabouts of Villa and his main force today is unknown," Funston wired.

"Villa forces consist of 12,000 men, 36 guns, and an unknown number of machine guns. His men suffered terribly during operations here from thirst and hunger, but their spirit is shown by the fact that less than a dozen deserted to our side. All women, children and camp followers usually to be found with a Mexican force, were left at Casas Grandes, and he has with him nothing but fighting men."

"It may not be understood at the War Department why, in view of existing orders, the men fired upon the retreating parties, considering the fact that some bullets and shells struck on the American side, and three men of the Seventh Infantry were wounded. Funston continued: 'This was not done because of the evident fact that both commanders were doing all they could to prevent injury to Americans. The principal faults were committed by Calles' men, and I could not in fairness open on Villa without treating Calles the same.'"

Funston described conditions as satisfactory and added: "I consider the immediate danger passed." He told of a conference between himself and Villa at the border, of which Gen. Funston says: "His (Villa's) attitude was quite satisfactory."

STREET CROWD IS IN PANIC AS DETECTIVES SHOOT AFTER AUTO

which began ten days ago. It was then that Inspector Cray learned that several men calling themselves city scavengers were gaining access to banks and jewelry stores on the East Side and in the Bronx, and inspecting the premises and the adjoining yards. They made many measurements of the distances from doors and windows. When Cray learned that Jack Dresser was in the party he determined to watch the men, and Detective Dowling, Oliver, Fennelly and Driben were detailed to "tail" them.

Night and day detectives followed Dresser, always having in the background a Police Department motor car or policemen on motor cycles.

Dresser discovered that he was being followed and tried his best to throw the detectives off, but failed. This afternoon they came directly on him as he walked toward a big touring car standing at the corner of First Avenue and Second Street. He bolted, waving a signal to Levine and Cohen to get into the car with him. The three got in and then Dresser saw the detectives almost beside him. He cried out an alarm to Morris, the driver, and the machine darted up the avenue.

The four detectives had their own car within easy call and when it came up they were in the pursuit and on. At high speed and winding in and out among the vehicles and pedestrians, the car with Dresser and his pals aboard Street the detectives. They crouched low in the tonneau so that heads were scarcely visible. They kept their horn going and managed to clear the way for themselves and keep ahead of the police car.

The detectives, finding that the traffic kept them from getting abreast of the car ahead, drew their revolvers and opened fire. But the six shots they were able to fire only caused the fugitives to go the faster.

At last the traffic opened sufficiently to permit the police car to run alongside the other. Gradually it crowded Dresser's machine to the curb and at Twenty-second Street the detectives leaped out and leaped aboard. Then there was a brief session with bullets and revolver butts and the four yielded.
